Diogal

Born in 1970 in Senegal, Diogal is an author, composer and interpreter of his songs. Living in France, he released two albums - Samba Alla in 2002 and Liir in 2004 (Celluloid/Melodie) - which received great reviews by the press, were endorsed by FIP and appreciated by the professionals. He has collaborated with Loy Ehrlich, Daby Touré, Lokua Kanza, Wasis Diop, Louis Winsberg... Diogal passed by many concert halls and festivals, in France and abroad (Chorus des Hauts-de-Seine, Primeurs de Massy, Jazz sous les pommiers, AfriCajarc, etc...).

New album

In his new album, Diogal finds inspiration in the musical richness related to the ethnic diversity of Senegal. He involves us in his universe with traditional African rhythms (lebaus, mandingues), as well as folk and pop. Traditional percussions (sabar, tama, calbasse, brushes, cajón) mix with the western musical instruments. In his songs, Diogal pays tribute to the great Malian musician Ali Farka Touré and speaks about human behavior, people's relation to their own origins, the sea, global warming, his village and love. His third album is the first in which the artist ensures all the arrangements and the production. The 12 titles of the new album are recorded at Diogal's studio, Wasia.

On internet

On Diogal's website, one can listen to a few songs, see pictures and videos (live performances and a 2 minutes presentation of the new album), and be informed about the next concerts. The album may be purchased there as well.
